Peek Inside the Book

Hateful to me as the gates of Hades is that man who hides one thing in his heart and speaks another.
Homer, The Iliad //

Come, Friend, you too must die. Why moan about it so? Even Patroclus died, a far, far better man than you. And look, you see how handsome and powerful I am? The son of a great man, the mother who gave me life--A deathless goddess. But even for me, I tell you, Death and the strong force of fate are waiting. There will come a dawn or sunset or high noon When a man will take my life in battle...

Reader's Opinions

In November 2015 I read The Trojan Women, a play by Euripides about the fate of the women of Troy after the city's fall. This play made me wonder why I had never managed to read The Iliad. Of course I knew the basic story, who doesn't? Long long war, gods and goddesses, a wooden horse, no more Troy. But the details? I had no idea of...
